Take advantage of a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to travel with Sewanee students and faculty for an educational, cultural, and an unforgettable field study to Bangladesh (home of the Nobel Peace Prize winning Grameen Bank and of BRAC) and India. The program centers on a course on Microfinance Institutions in South Asia with a community engagement component. It is more than four weeks in duration, 13 days of study in Sewanee, 7 days in Bangladesh, 7 days in India, and 3 days would be spent in travel. The program is led by Dr. Yasmeen Mohiuddin, professor of economics.

ECON 347: Microfinance Institutions in South Asia. The course would provide an overview of the microfinance industry: its origins, evolution, theoretical underpinnings, and empirical evidence. It would focus on both the tools of microfinance operation such as financial management and lending methodologies, and on the basic issues and policy debates in microfinance, such as impact assessment, poverty targeting and measurement, and sustainability.
